

Abstract

Improved methods and apparatus for telecommunications call service and call feature processing utilize a compiled representation of a textual description in a mark-up language of operations describing a telecommunication service is generated. Objects, hereinafter referred to as context objects, access this compiled representation, in response to events occurring with respect to a telecommunication service in order to effect the execution of the operations.

10 924268